In 2018, 28 Pakistani police officers participated in a two-week NYPD-led civil disorder and crisis management training in Islamabad, funded by the US embassy's Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs. The programme covered crowd dynamics, team tactics, and non-lethal force, and included a train-the-trainer component. In 2024, the NYPD's Pakistani American Law Enforcement Society met with Sindh Chief Minister Murad Ali Shah and offered train Sindh police in street crime, petty crime, intelligence, traffic management, and vigilance, though this training has not taken place yet
